

Second Battle of Bull Run

Actions 3pm, August 30, 1862

N

0

1 km

0

1 mile

This map illustrates the tactical positions during the Second Battle of Bull Run on August 30, 1862. The Union Army, represented by blue lines and labels, is positioned in the center and right, with major units including Reno, Hooker, Porter, Schurz, Reynolds, and Chinn. They are situated near Stony Ridge, Matthews Hill, and Chinn Ridge. The Confederate Army, represented by red lines and labels, is positioned on the left and top, with major units including Jackson, Lawton, Starke, and Lee. They are positioned near Stony Ridge, Stony Hill, and the Manassas Gap Railroad. The map shows the Bull Run river, various hills, and roads, including the Unfinished Railroad and the Manassas-Sudley Springs Road. Key locations like Sudley Springs Ford, Sudley Church, and the Stone Bridge are marked. The map also shows the positions of the Union and Confederate armies at the time of the battle, with the Union army positioned on the right and the Confederate army on the left. The map includes a scale bar and a north arrow.